

ScottMadden Reviews How to Design a Program that Increases Your “Robot Velocity” Using a Four-Phase Approach

ATLANTA, GA – (August 15, 2018) – ScottMadden, Inc., a general management consulting firm, recently joined industry leaders as a presenter at SSON’s Intelligent Automation (IA) Week event. This event provided a unique opportunity to review leading practices for robotic process automation (RPA), cognitive intelligent, and artificial intelligence.

During the event, Brad DeMent and Trey Robinson, partners at ScottMadden, reviewed a proven process to identify the right stakeholders to propel your program, select high-value processes and set up quick test environments, and define COE governance that works for all digital automation (not just RPA). “Accelerating developmental pilots is a low-risk, low-cost way to physically demonstrate RPA value and educate your stakeholders with hands-on experience that cannot be supplied by brochures, internet research, or even RPA conferences. ScottMadden can guide you through your first pilot and train your resources simultaneously to become self-sufficient,” explains Mr. DeMent.

“Some organizations struggle to move beyond a pilot, but with a thoughtful governance model, companies can successfully make the transition to enterprise automation. Developing an effective governance model is the enabler to implementing automation at scale,” adds Mr. Robinson.
